I. Abstract
Migrants play a prominent role in the Kerala’s economic development and many of them have found greener pastures abroad. Their remittance to Kerala is one of the major components of state Gross Domestic Product. Due to various economic changes many of the migrants are returning to their home country. This will have a negative impact on Kerala’s economy like unemployment, family financial issues, decrease in migrant remittance etc. So, the government should take care of the migrants and the return migrants. For the welfare of migrants and returnees the government of Kerala established Non-Resident Keralites Affairs Department. The aim of the study is to analyse various schemes initiated by government through Non-Resident Keralites Affairs Department for the migrants and return migrants in Kerala.

KEYWORDS: Migrant, Remittance, Return migrant, Welfare, Schemes

II. Introduction
Human migration from one place to another is an integral part of the world history. Globalization is considered as the major reason behind the migration of people all over the world. Many people migrate to various places for a better life. People expect better employment opportunities, income, better lifestyle and fortune in destination countries. Migration usually occurs from underdeveloped countries to developed countries and from poor rural areas to urban areas within the country. Migration has huge impact on both the native economy and destination economy of the migrants. Migration is depended on the size and composition of the population of a country. When a country’s population increases it also increases the demand for their goods and services. It leads to an increase in production activities which in turn will generate more employment opportunities. But this theory of correlation does not occur always in under developed and developing countries like India. The increasing population creates a more serious issue that is unemployment. India has a large pool of skilled and educated youth and they find it very hard to get a suitable job of their educational qualification in their own country. Secured jobs with better working conditions and decent salary are less so, many people migrate to other countries in search of better opportunities. Of the nearly 31 million non-resident Indians, an estimated 8.5 million are working in the Gulf. Migrant’s remittance is a significant factor in the development of Kerala. The huge migration from Kerala to Gulf started in 1970s after the oil discovery boom. Since then, Gulf migrant’s remittances created many progressive changes in the Kerala’s economy. Kerala economy is largely depended on migrant remittance.

Migrant’s return to their home country is an unavoidable phase of the migration cycle. Due to many reasons migrants return to their native place. The return may be forced or voluntary. Reasons may be economic crisis, retrenchment, retirement, health problems, job insecurity, nationalisation process in the destination country, reduction in business activities, and bitter experience in destination country etc. The migrant’s return critically affects both their native economy and their families. The reduction in remittances severely affects their family’s finance and their children’s education. The migrant’s native economy suffers increased unemployment, rehabilitation issues and decreased migrant remittance. The returnees post return life mainly depended on the nature of their return. During voluntary return the migrants take proper plans regarding their departure and post return life and they may have some savings for that. But in the case of forced migrant return they do not get enough time to make plans about their post departure life and the sudden loss of their job makes their life worse. In Kerala majority of the skilled and unskilled works are being filled with the migrants from different parts of our country. This severely affect the returnees to find a suitable job. The wage structure in Kerala is low when compared to other countries, so it also affects the returnee’s financial status. Proper support is needed by the returnees during the post return phase. This is depended on the rehabilitation and reintegration initiatives of the native state.

On 6th December 1996, Government of Kerala launched the Department of non-resident Keralite’s Affairs (NORKA) to redress the grievances of non-resident Keralites both in India and abroad and to have a sustainable partnership with them. NORKA is established for their welfare and to offer assistance and to provide help to the needy in times of emergency. NORKA has taken many initiatives and schemes for the welfare of the migrants and return migrants. In India, Kerala is then first state to set up a department for the welfare of non-resident Keralites. In 1998, Non-Resident Keralites Welfare Agency was established as a field agency to implement and execute the welfare schemes developed by NORKA. As it failed to meet its mandate, the Government of Kerala dissolved NORKWA in 2002, four years after it was set up. NORKA ROOTS was initiated in 2002 to act as an interlink between the Government of Kerala and the non-resident keralites.

16. Pravasi Bhadratha – MICRO
Under this scheme assistance is offered to migrants in starting micro and small-scale business. This scheme is implemented through Kerala State Financial Enterprises. Capital subsidy is offered at Rs. 25% of the loan amount and up to a maximum of one lakh rupees and loans up to five lakh rupees is offered.
VI. CONCLUSION

The migrants play crucial role in the economic development of Kerala. So, it is the duty of the Government to take necessary measures to support the migrants and to rehabilitate the return migrants. The COVID 19 pandemic paved way for global economic recession. The reduced business activities across the world left many migrants unemployed. Along with other factors this also increased the number of return migrants to the state. The unexpected return affected low paid migrant workers. So, in order to provide support, the migrants and to rehabilitate the returnees Kerala Government is conducting various programmes through NORKA. NORKA plays a major role in the lives of non-resident Keralites by supporting them during emergencies. They have introduced above mentioned schemes to support to migrants and returnees. Many migrants and returnees have availed these schemes. The agency is actively engaged in supporting the migrants and returnees. Through social medias and through print medias government is creating awareness among public regarding various initiatives of the agency. This organisation is a model that can be implemented in other Indian states which have a large number of migrants.
